

A Good Address

Hip New York City girls love East Sixth Street for its (original) Daryl K store. Now there's a new kid on the block: Martin, a teeny-tiny shop owned by designer Anne Johnston Albert, ABOVE. If you'd rather go rummaging in a cool friend's closet than go shopping, run, don't walk, to Martin, which is stocked with Albert's shrunken velvet boy blazers, sexy low-slung trousers, sweet lace tops, prim yet twisted tartan wrap skirts, and an oddball selection of vintage shoes hunted down by Albert herself.
